

SEEDS – UnitelmaSapienza Summer School: Behavioural Economics for Sustainability

Rome, October 2-3, 2025

UnitelmaSapienza, located in Rome (Italy), is organizing the 1st SEEDS Summer School on Behavioural Economics for Sustainability on the 2nd-3rd October 2025.

The aim of the school is to train PhD students and junior researchers working in the field of sustainability transition who are interested in applying behavioural tools. Theoretical lectures on behavioural economics will be accompanied with applicative modules. The school is organised by the Bioeconomy in Transition Group – BiT-RG (UnitelmaSapienza), in collaboration with University of Ferrara and the Sustainability Environmental Economics and Dynamics Studies (SEEDS). SEEDS is an inter-university research centre which develops research and higher education projects in the fields of ecological and environmental economics, with a special focus on the role of policy and innovation.

Programme

The Summer School will include an icebreaking event (1st October), one and a half days of lectures, and a half day dedicated to selected applicants' presentations, reserved for PhD and Junior researchers (2nd-3rd October).

Specifically, this session can provide feedback and mentoring opportunities to the younger community.

The detailed programme will be published when available.

Call for application

The SEEDS Summer School "Behavioural Economics for Sustainability" welcomes Ph.D. students from diverse disciplines, providing a platform for junior researchers to learn about behavioural economics and relevant tools employed in the field, engage with leading scholars, present their research, and foster interdisciplinary dialogue on sustainability transition.
